

BAHRIA
Humanities and Social Sciences School (BH3S)

Islamabad, Pakistan

Overview

The Humanities and Social Sciences Program was initiated at Bahria University in the autumn of 2007. Since its commencement, the department has made commendable progress as the department of Media Studies, Law and Professional Psychology were the streams of H&SS. This program encompasses a diverse range of disciplines and currently provides four major streams under Bachelor of Social Sciences (BSS), including International Relations, Development Studies, Anthropology, and Sociology. Each major track imparts a comprehensive understanding of theoretical and practical aspects through an engaging selection of Humanities and Social Sciences courses. Bahria University's social sciences degree program is renowned as one of the premier undergraduate programs in the country, strategically designed to prepare students for the evolving challenges of an increasingly multicultural and global professional landscape. With time, the department made academic progress by offering new programs such as BS English, BS Public Health, MS in Applied Anthropology, MS in Government and Public Policy, MS in International Relations, and Ph.D. in International Relations.

Research and Innovation

Faculty members publish research papers. Many researchers are associated with policy institutes and Research Think Tanks. From 2022 to 2023, the faculty published 35 research articles in reputable journals.

Industry - Academia Partnership

The department has four MOUs:

- Hanns-Seidel Foundation, Pakistan (HSF)
- Institute of Policy Studies (IPS)
- Hashoo Foundation
- Verso Consulting

Corporate Advisory Committee (CAC)

The department regularly organizes meetings of the Corporate Advisory Council/s. During 2022-23, two separate meetings of corporate advisory committees were held, one for the International Relations cluster and the other for the Public Health Program. The department has planned two more meetings of Corporate Advisory Councils during the year 2023-24. The members of these councils have international and national reputations in their respective fields. The suggestions of such council meetings are regularly incorporated in road maps, etc., for bettering programs and departments.
